WILDEST ENTHUSIASM.

Remarkable Scene in New York's Democratic Convention.

HILL NAMED BY ACCLAMATION

Despite Repeated Declinations, the Senator Is Placed at the Head of the Ticket Lockwood for Lieutenant Governor and Gaynor for Court of Appeals.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 27.—A scene such as no delegate at the state Democratic convention which closed yesterday ever witnessed before, and which is without parallel in the history of conventions, except perhaps that in 1876, when Seymour was nominated by acclamation against the wishes of the majority of the delegates, took place in the Casino rink yesterday, when all mentioned candidates were forgotten and the advent of David B. Hill's name caused a stampede in his favor. Fifteen hundred people stood upon their feet yelling themselves hoarse two bands of music tried to drown the tumult, and Senator David B. Hill pounded violently but ineffectually with his gavel in an attempt to restore order.

It was a scene of disorder, but of enthusiasm, that will probably not be witnessed in a decade. It was the strange situation of a presiding officer of a convention, evidently against his expressed desires, being forced to accept a unanimous nomination when other candidates had been presented and apparently accepted by the delegates. While the scene was a remarkable one, it was not an altogether unexpected one. The Associated Press dispatches of the past few days have indicated that there was every probability that the convention would be stampeded for David B. Hill.

Mr. Hitt had finished his speech nominating John Boyd Thacher, and had been received with enthusiasm. Delegates looked at one another and expected the nomination would be made by acclamation. Even Senator Hill himself, with the gavel in hand, had ordered the roll to be called and breathed a sigh of relief, evidently believing the crisis had passed. But a slight built man from Allegany county, who had never been known in the councils of the party, threw a firebrand which created a sensation almost beyond belief. When the county was reached Delegate Reynolds arose and amidst the intense silence said:

"The united delegation from Allegany county desire to place in nomination for governor their first and only choice, David B. Hill."

Then occurred one of the wildest scenes that could be imagined. Delegates jumped upon the chairs, spectators crowded into the aisles, hats were thrown heavenward, canes with ribbons waved wildly and men yelled themselves hoarse in the cheer after cheer that almost rent the frail building in twain. Senator Hill grew pale with emotion, but even almost faint hope that he would be able to stem the tide pounded vigorously with the gavel and cried for order. The secretaries left their desks, and jumping upon chairs also cheered with the multitude. Bourke Cockran, John R. Fellows, Mayor Gilroy, Thomas F. Grady and other leaders jumped upon the press tables and urged on the applause. The only persons in the hall who were unmoved were those few members of the press who, during the chaos, were endeavoring to complete their stories. Finally, from sheer exhaustion, the vast audience ceased its applause enough to allow Senator Hill's voice to be heard, and in a hussy voice he said:

"I am grateful to the Democracy of the Empire state for their courtesy and kindness and support in the past, but I must say to you that I cannot be your candidate again for governor."

There were cries of "No, no," and "You're the only one" from the delegates, and the applause was renewed. But in the intervals Senator Hill managed to insist that the roll of delegates should be called.

Senator McMahon said: "I raise the point of order that the roll call may be dispensed with by a unanimous vote of the delegates."

Senator Hill—I have had some slight parliamentary experience myself, and the roll cannot be dispensed with by unanimous consent.

The clerk, therefore, began again the calling of the roll. Several county leaders arose and announced their delegations for Senator Hill.

When New York was reached Senator Guy jumped to his feet. There were cries of "platform," but he stood on a chair and the delegates listened breathlessly to what he had to say. He spoke in part as follows:

"We have been sent here to perform the most important duty in behalf of the Democratic party that has ever been performed in the state. It is incumbent upon us to select the man who in the largest measure represents the hopes, the expectations, the principles of the Democratic party, and who can best meet the needs of the present hour. There is one man in the state of New York, Mr. Chairman, whose name is upon the lips of every live Democrat of the state. He has never failed the Democracy, and in its hour of need he cannot fail it now. He has led us to countless victories under adverse circumstances in the past, and he will and must lead us now. In the councils of the nation he has had added lustre to the name of the Empire state, and in the heroic battle for Democratic principles which he wielded side by side with our Democratic president he has won thousands and thousands of friends among those who were formerly his enemies.

"He told us that he cannot accept our nomination. But, I say to you, gentlemen, that we owe a duty to the Democracy of this state higher than any courtesy, even to him. In the name of that Democracy, against the wish of our presiding officer, and, if needs be, in defiance of it, I place in nomination the one man that every Democrat in his heart will follow to the polls or to the death. I present the name of that greatest living exponent of Democratic principles, Senator David B. Hill."

SENATOR DAVID B. HILL.

Mr. Guy had barely finished when the same scene that occurred when Hill's name was first mentioned was repeated. The delegates pushed down the aisles toward the front and threatened to invade the stage. Senator Hill said, out of the din:

"The rules of the assembly are in force here, and the roll call should be allowed to proceed."

The gavel was banged several times, and the applause subsided somewhat, but it was almost immediately resumed when, jumping upon the press table in front of the stage, Bourke Cockran faced them and waved both hands for order. In an instant the noise ceased and the congressman began an impassioned speech calling upon the convention to disregard Hill's declination and to make him the candidate.

When Cockran had finished the scenes that had preceded this were as a mere nothing in comparison with the pandemonium that reigned for at least five minutes. Then Mr. Cochran shouted.

"All in favor of the nomination of David B. Hill will say aye."

There was a perfect howl from five hundred throats.

"Contrary, no," shouted Cockran, and there was not a voice. Turning to Senator Hill he said: "Now, Senator, we summon you to your duty."

Again the delegates went wild with excitement, and for five minutes there was great disorder.

Senator Hill insisted that order should be preserved and the roll call continued, but at the sound of his voice the applause took on new impetus. Senator Canfor jumped to his feet and said: "All in favor of Senator Hill's nomination by acclamation will say aye." Another shout and more disorder followed. Senator Hill kept insisting upon order, and the roll call of assembly districts was begun.

Mr. Hitt, on behalf of the Albany county delegation, withdrew Mr. Thacher's name, and there was pandemonium once more. The leaders restored quiet, and the roll call proceeded. Erie county named David B. Hill, and Cleveland Dederick, amid great confusion, said: "David B. Hill has received two votes, all that were cast."

Delegates raised for the stage and shouted for recognition to forbid Senator Hill, if he refused. The leaders, however, stopped all argument on the very same ground, and quickly the convention went on with its work.

Lieutenant Governor Sheehan then arose and in a brief eulogium nominated Hon. Daniel N. Lockwood, of Buffalo, for the office of lieutenant governor. The nomination was made by acclamation amid great applause. Mr. James D. Bell, of Brooklyn, named Judge Gaynor for judge of the court of appeals, and the convention nominated him by acclamation.

The usual resolutions were adopted.

The motion to adjourn was carried, Senator Hill saying: "The convention that is running itself wants to adjourn. I declare it adjourned."

SENATOR HILL SERENADED.

He Intimates That He Will Yield to the Convention's Demand.

ALBANY, Sept. 27.—Senator Hill and Hon. Daniel N. Lockwood, the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, respectively, were serenaded last night at the Kenmore hotel, when they came from Saratoga, by the Albany Democratic club. A mighty swell of voices went up when Senator Hill was introduced. He said:

"Fellow Democrats and Gentlemen of the Albany Phalanx: For this gracious reception and the compliment of this serenade I tender you my sincere thanks. This demonstration is a part of the unexpected events of a day which to me has been one of mingled surprise and embarrassment. The action of the Democratic convention, which is the occasion of this assemblage, and which was as unforeseen by you as by myself, imposes responsibilities and obligations of which I cannot speak tonight.

"Unwilling as I was to receive the honor which the convention, in spite of my protest, has sought to confer upon me, I am deeply touched by the unusual manifestation of confidence and esteem which accompanied the action of the convention, and tonight I can only express in feeble language a small part of the gratitude which I feel towards the Democracy of New York."

MR. WHITNEY'S DECLINATION.

He Regards Senator Hill as the Best Man for the Place.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—William C. Whitney was interviewed at quarantine yesterday forenoon, before the opening of the Saratoga convention, and announced positively that he would under no circumstances accept the Democratic nomination for governor. He declined to enter at length into his reasons, but gave the impression that his business interests would not allow of his accepting the nomination.

"In the first place," he said, "I will not accept the nomination under any circumstances. There are plenty of better men in the Democratic party, men who would be more acceptable and more successful than I. I regard David B. Hill as the very best man for the place. I think he would poll an enormous vote. Of course I think the next governor will be a Democrat. I hope to see a strong man nominated."

This interview was at once telegraphed to Saratoga, and when the delegates assembled at 1:50 p. m. they knew that Mr. Whitney was not to be mentioned.

The President "Out of Politics."

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., Sept. 27.—An Associated Press reporter called President Cleveland's attention to the nomination of Senator Hill at the Saratoga convention last evening. It was the first information he had had of the result, and when asked for an opinion said, "I am out of politics now." The face of the chief executive was a study, but by no word of mouth could he be induced to express his satisfaction or regret at the action of the Democratic convention.

The Yalu Engagement.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 27.—Captain Tong Biquen has been executed for cowardice. The cruiser Kwang Kai stranded on a reef near Talien bay while trying to escape during the progress of the naval battle off the Yalu. She was afterwards blown up by the Japanese. This makes a total Chinese loss in the battle of five ships, including one which was accidentally rammed by the Chinese battleship Tai Yuen while the latter was endeavoring to ram a vessel of the enemy's fleet. The loss of one Japanese vessel, and probably three, in the Yalu engagement is confirmed.

Anti-Polish Agitation in Germany.

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—The recent speeches of the emperor and Prince Bismarck have been the signal for a regular persecution of the Poles in certain sections of the press. The Cologne Gazette and the other National Liberal organs make daily endeavors to decry Chancellor von Caprivi by demanding the adoption of extreme measures against the Poles and Socialists.

Bomb Makers Arrested in Florence.

FLORENCE, Sept. 27.—The recent finding in this city of two bombs led to the arrest of a man named Salsal and two accomplices on the charge of having been engaged in the wholesale manufacture of infernal machines.

THE GREAT STALLION RACE

Directum Defeats Arion and Nelson in Three Straight Heats.

MEDFORD, Mass., Sept. 27.—The biggest crowd that ever assembled on a track in New England gathered at Mystic Park yesterday afternoon to witness the greatest stallion race ever contested in the east. The contest was between Directum, Arion and Nelson. When the stallions were given the word the second time they came down the track, with Nelson almost half a length behind the others. Directum had the pole, with Arion second and the Maine horse on the outside. The quarter pole was reached in 33 seconds, with Directum a neck ahead of Arion and Nelson half a length behind. The half was made in 1:05 and the three-quarter in 1:38, with the positions unchanged. Directum finished half a length ahead of Arion, with Nelson lagging a length behind. Time 2:12.

The trio started in the second heat with Nelson slightly in the lead. At the quarter pole he still led Directum, with Arion almost a length in the rear of the black. At the half the Maine trotter had increased his lead to a length, and the crowd almost went wild with enthusiasm. Then Directum spurted, and at the third quarter was a length in the lead, with Arion and Nelson neck and neck. In the stretch Nelson dropped behind and finished three lengths in the rear of Directum, who beat Arion by a length. Time by quarters: First, on half, 1:03; three-quarters, 1:37; mile, 2:10. This was the best time of the day and the fastest time ever trotted over Mystic Park track in a race.

When the horses got off again Nelson was half a length behind. At the quarter Directum was a neck ahead of Arion, but a few seconds later the latter created a stir by creeping past him. A little past the half, however, Directum again drew to the front, and at the three-quarter pole he led Arion by a length. He finished two lengths ahead, with Nelson over three lengths from the wire. Time by quarters 33¾, 1:06, 1:39, 2:13½.

Professor Shortlidge on Trial.

MEDIA, Pa., Sept. 27.—The trial of Professor Swithin C. Shortlidge, the well known educator, and for twenty-four years the principal of the Media Academy for Young Men, for murder, was begun in the criminal court here yesterday. In a fit of insanity Professor Shortlidge on Dec. 31 last, while walking near the beautiful grounds, shot down his wife, to whom he had been married but six weeks. A jury was quickly secured and the taking of evidence began.

FITZSIMMONS WINS.

Creedon No Match for the Lanky Australian.

KNOCKED OUT IN TWO ROUNDS.

The Five Thousand Spectators Present Amazed at the Rapidity with Which Bob Downed His Adversary—Corbett Must Now Accept Fitz's Challenge.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 27.—The glove contest between Bob Fitzsimmons, of Newark, N. J., and Dan Creedon, hailing from St. Louis, for a purse of $5,000, took place in the arena of the Olympic club last night. They fought as middleweights, at 154 pounds. Both men are Australians by birth, but Fitzsimmons is now an American citizen by adoption. This was the star event of the carnival, and was a match that had attracted more interest than most of the pugilistic matters of recent date. Fitzsimmons has been so prominently before the public for some years that any match in which he was a participant was bound to create interest throughout the entire country.

An additional feature in the importance of the match was the bearing it has to a prospective meeting between Fitzsimmons and Corbett. Fitzsimmons has been most persevering in his efforts to secure a match with the champion heavyweight, and from time to time has been put off with the reminder that he was not in his class. Corbett first named Coynski as the man lanky Bob had to whip before he could talk of a match. Fitzsimmons took on the match, and then he was told by the champion that he would have to go with Creedon to place himself in a position to talk fight.

At 9:15 there were probably 5,000 spectators present. Creedon was the first to enter the ring, closely followed by Fitzsimmons. Creedon weighed 158 pounds and Fitzsimmons 155½.

The seconds for Creedon were Thomas Tracey, Mick Dunn, Tommy White and Charley Daley. For Fitzsimmons, Jack Dempsey, James Dwyer, Kid McCoy and Samuel H. Stern. John Duffy acted as referee.

After the usual instructions the men advanced to the center of the ring, and the fight went on.

First Round—Both men felt each other for an opening. Fitzsimmons led. He was short, however, but he forced the fighting and landed on the head, and Creedon scored a hard body blow. A moment later Creedon caught a left on the chin and three on the head. The men had to be separated by the referee.

Second Round—Creedon missed a light left swing for the head, but he landed two rights on the body. Fitzsimmons scored two heavy rights and knocked Creedon down with a heavy right hand on the jaw. Fitzsimmons landed heavily with his right, and the men had to be forced from a clinch. Creedon received two heavy rights on the jaw and three on the body, and a second later was completely knocked out by a heavy left on the jaw.

There was the wildest demonstration ever seen in the ring. Referee Duffy awarded the fight to Fitzsimmons, who was loudly cheered. Referee Duffy then announced Fitzsimmons' challenge to Champion Corbett, and the applause that followed was immense.

The work of Fitzsimmons in the second round was the most marvelous ever seen in this section. The right handers which Creedon received on the head in one, two, three order amazed the spectators and dazed the recipient, but they were nothing from an artistic pugilistic point of view compared with the three heavy lefts delivered in the one, two, three order on Creedon's nose, which floored the latest aspirant for middleweight honors and caused Creedon to fall the easiest prey of all Robert Fitzsimmons' adversaries. Creedon was carried to his corner gasping hard for breath and showing traces of blood trickling from his nose.

Creedon was comparatively unhurt during the first round, and went to his corner smiling happily and chatting with his attendants. The inference, then, is that he was beaten in one minute and forty seconds, the time of the second round. His seconds and his backers were startled beyond measure, and even those who desired Fitzsimmons' defeat, and there were many, were overawed and full of wonderment at the tall man's marvelous fistic skill.

A Hundred and Two Years Old.

RED BANK, N. J., Sept. 27.—Joseph Field celebrated his 102d birthday at his home here yesterday. He told some of his guests that he expected to live a good many years longer. His three children all assisted him in the reception of his guests. Mr. Field was not married until he was nearly 75 years of age, his bride being fifty years younger than he. He has been a widower twenty-two years.

Y., May 21, 1885.—"I have had great experience as a nurse and midwife for the last five or six years, and I have never found anything so good as Gilmore's Aromatic Wine; have found it excellent for young ladies arriving at maturity, and also for ladies in the decline or change of life. I recommend it to the afflicted."

MRS. AMELIA PLUCKER.

A HIDDEN FORTUNE UNEARTHED.

Seventy-five Thousand Dollars Found in an Old Fashioned Bookcase.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 27.—A hidden treasure of $75,000 was discovered by accident at the old homestead of the late David Morrison, at 225 Western avenue, Allegheny City, causing consternation among the workmen and joy among those who will be benefited by the find.

When the wealthy David Morrison died several years ago it was known that a large sum of money was secreted somewhere about his residence, but since then, notwithstanding the most diligent search made by his heirs, the money could not be found, and hope had to be abandoned.

Yesterday, however, while the household effects were being packed preparatory to removal to the home of John Fitzsimmons, Philadelphia, who is a nephew of the eccentric old gentleman, an old fashioned bookcase was encountered, which could not be taken apart until an expert had been called in. He, in taking the concern to pieces, brought to light a secret drawer, which fell with a crash to the floor, throwing out a promiscuous mass of gold, silver, notes and certificates to the amount of $75,000 at least, probably more.

REVEALED BY THE SPIRITS.

Came Back to Find Himself Legally Dead and His Wealth Distributed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 27.—Dr. Thomas Tynan, the Modesto physician and capitalist whom the courts have declared to be dead, and whose $200,000 estate has been distributed among his relatives, arrived in San Francisco yesterday.

Dr. Tynan was pale and slightly emaciated, but appeared to be in fair health. He said he had been in Boston all the time since his strange disappearance, and that the reason for his sudden leaving over two years ago was to avoid the annoyance of litigation begun by his stepdaughters to recover property which they alleged belonged to them.

The old man said he would probably have never returned had not Slater, the spiritualist, discovered him in Boston and brought him to Reno. Slater, who claims to have been guided by the spirits, will receive the $5,000 reward offered by Mrs. Tynan for information of her husband's whereabouts.

A Moonshiner Prepared for Fight.

STURGIS, Ky., Sept. 27.—Not long since a moonshiners' outfit was found on the premises of William Goode, keeper of the poorhouse, by Deputy United States Marshal Dyer, but the officers failed to apprehend Goode. Since that time he and others have been accused of burning barns and committing various other crimes. The citizens are becoming thoroughly aroused and have run Goode and his gang into the hills. The posse was repulsed yesterday, and Goode and his men have so far resisted arrest. A further effort will be made to capture the criminals, and a bloody fight will result, as they are armed to the teeth.

Train Robbers Frightened Off.

GALVESTON, Tex., Sept. 27.—The Santa Fe express was held up at a water tank south of Temple at 1 a. m. Two men ran the fireman and engineer off the engine. They evidently had confederates and expected to rob the train, but the confederates were either at the wrong place or there was some misunderstanding. The fireman broke away from the robbers and reported the case to Conductor Welles. Meanwhile the brakeman came up and the robbers, believing he was the advance picket of a rescuing train crew, jumped from the engine and fled.

Sunk by a Lake Collision.

DETOUR, Mich., Sept. 27.—The steamer Ohio collided with the schooner Ironton ten miles north of Presque Island early in the morning. The Ohio sunk inside of half an hour. The crew of sixteen took to the boats. Two of the Ironton's crew were picked up by the steamer Charles Hebard. The remainder of the crew are not accounted for as yet. The Ironton was commanded by Captain Peter Girard, of this city. It is not known whether he is among the missing or not. The cook was a Mrs. Hall.

The Motorman Fainted.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—While a well filled open trolley car of the Lancaster avenue branch of the Philadelphia Traction company was proceeding out Walnut street, Motorman James Dulan fainted and fell to the floor. The car, which contained many women, dashed forward with no one to check its speed, and came into collision with a cart, throwing the passengers in every direction. Police Sergeant McDonald, a woman, and the driver of the cart were seriously injured.

Fatalities at a Fire.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Sept. 27.—One of the most disastrous fires in the history of Fayetteville occurred here Tuesday night. Half a dozen large stores are a mass of ruins. By the sudden collapse of the Harrison building Arthur Allen was instantly killed, Gordon Gee mortally injured and William Hodge had his jaw broken and legs badly injured. Several others were more or less seriously injured. The total loss will aggregate $150,000.

MR. WELLMAN HOME.

The Arctic Explorer Back from the Frozen North.

THE STORY OF THE EXPEDITION.

Mr. Wellman Tells of the Insurmountable Difficulties That Beset the Expedition, Culminating in the Loss of the Ragnvald Jarl and the Safe Retreat.

QUARANTINE, N. Y., Sept. 27.—The steamer Spree, which arrived at Quarantine last night, had on board the following gentlemen belonging to the Arctic expedition: Professor Walter Wellman, Professor C. B. French, of the coast and geodetic survey, of Washington, who was astronomical observer of the party; Dr. Thomas B. Mohun, medical officer, and Charles C. Dodge, artist and photographer, all of whom belonged in Washington.

They left here last March, bound for the north pole via Norway, and have been gone a little over six months. Mr. Wellman, who was in charge, gives the following account of the expedition:

"On the first of May we left the town of Thomso, in Norway, on the steamer Ragnvald Jarl, with twenty-five persons all told, sixteen of whom belonged to the expedition and nine to the crew. We reached Spitzbergen on the 7th day of May, lat. 79 45, depositing a large quantity of provisions, leaving it in charge of Professor Oyen, a Norwegian geologist who was to study the glaciers. May 10, finding open water on the north coast of Spitzbergen, the steamer was headed for the Southern Island, 150 miles to the northeast.

"After several battles with the ice we reached Table Island on the 18th of May, and were then in lat. 80.50, or within 550 miles of the north pole, within fourteen miles as far as had been reached by the Lockwood or Brainard expeditions. Thus far we had covered as much ground as other expeditions had in months, or even years.

"Storms now set in on the 15th, and vast quantities of broken ice went drifting past. On the 17th the steamer was forced to the north, a little past the 81st parallel, and was then driven back by the floating ice, through which no steamer could have forced her way.

Finding what appeared to be a perfectly safe anchorage on the shore of Walden Island, the expedition of fourteen men left the ship on the 24th of May. Our course was to the eastward, skirting the northern shore of Northeast Land. Four days later we received word by messenger that the ship had been crushed by the ice. Fortunately most of the stores were saved.

"Notwithstanding this loss of the ship, which cut off outline of retreat, we decided to go on. After exploring most of the coast of the Northeast Land we found the ice thrown up in hopeless confusion in every direction. We made an effort with one boat and a picked crew of eight men to advance to the north, but so rough was the ice that after four days of indescribable effort we found that we had advanced less than four miles. The same conditions of ice existed as far as the eye could see.

"Further progress being impossible, we made our way back through many dangers and difficulties."

Will Not Brave the Cyclone.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The bulletin issued by Observer Dunn, calling attention of mariners and others to the cyclone that is rushing up the coast, has had the effect of preventing a number of persons from going to sea. The Ward line steamer Vigilancia, which sailed yesterday afternoon for Havana and Mexican ports, had a passenger list of about thirty-eight, but when the hour of sailing arrived only thirty of the number put in an appearance at the dock to brave the approaching storm. The Vigilancia, however, has anchored inside Sandy Hook, and will not put to sea until the force of the cyclone has subsided. Other vessels that should have sailed today are still lying at their piers. Reports show that the cyclone is general along the southern coast, and that it is working northward with diminished force.

Collision at Sea.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The North German Lloyd steamer Lahn, Captain Hellmers, which sailed Tuesday from Bremen for New York via Southampton, came into collision off The Hague at 11:30 p. m. with the bark Magdala, bound from a Swedish port for Marseilles with a cargo of timber. The Magdala's three masts were cut away, and the vessel, becoming waterlogged, was abandoned. The crew were landed at Southampton. The Lahn received no damage.

BESANT'S PATHETIC STORY OF "PAUL THE WANDERER."

The Quiet Dignity of a Man Who Was Living For Posterity—A Pretty Little Skit Written In the English Novelist's Inimitable Style.

I knew him for several years before his death. When I first made his acquaintance, he was already an old man. He was also, as was evident from the first, a very poor man. He went about shabbily dressed. He carried biscuits in his pocket to the reading room on which he lunched or took snacks at intervals during the day. Perhaps he had dinner afterward, but I always suspected his dinner to be an uncertain and a movable feast. It was understood that he was something in the literary way. I got to know him by sitting next to him day after day. We exchanged the amenities of the reading room, apologized for crowding each other with books, abused the talkers, remarked on the impudence of those who go to the room in order to flirt and so forth. When I got to know him better, I made little discoveries about him, as, for instance, that he liked a glass of beer in the middle of the day and that he could not afford the twopence. I may say, not boastfully, that I was able to offer him this little luxury. We used to go out together for the purpose. He was good enough to take an interest in my work. He proved to have a considerable knowledge of books and gave me considerable help in this way.

One Sunday I met him in the street. We stopped to speak. He lamented the closing of the museum on Sunday. For his own part, he said, he would have the reading room open every day in the week. Why close the avenues of knowledge? Why damn the fountains and springs of wisdom? So we walked and talked. He was perfectly dignified in his manner, though his great coat was so thin and shabby that one might be ashamed to be seen with him. He stopped presently at the door of a house in High street, Holborn.

"I lodge here," he said. "Will you come up stairs and see my hermitage?"

I remember that he called it grandly his hermitage. He led the way; the stairs were dark and dirty; he took me to the fifth, or fifty-fifth, floor. He lived in the back attic.

"This," he said, "is the cell of the recluse. I live here quite retired. There are other lodgers, I believe, but I do not know them. I live here with my library in simplicity. The air is wholesome at this height."

He threw open the window and sniffed the fragrance of the neighboring chimneys. The room was clean; the furniture was scanty; there was no fire in the grate; on a shelf were about 25 books—his library. The man looked perfectly contented with his hermitage. There were no papers on the table, nothing to show that he was a writer.

I do not know how he lived—certainly he did no work at the museum—but he never borrowed. In one corner stood a wooden chest. He lifted the lid and nodded and laughed.

"Aha!" he said, "now I am going to reveal a secret. You didn't know, nobody at the museum knows, the people in the house don't know, that I am—what do you think?—a poet. It is 30 years since I paid for the publication of my collected poetical works. Yes, sir, and I am going not only to communicate this secret to your honor—in safe keeping—but to present you with a copy. There, my young friend!" He produced a thin volume. "I am Paul the Wanderer." In fact, the title page bore the legend, "Collected Poetical Work of Paul the Wanderer."

"Thirty years," he repeated. "There were 500 copies. The press received 50, the public bought four; there remained 446. I have now given you one. There now remain 445. I have bequeathed these to the public libraries of the nation. Sir, you are young. You will yourself perhaps publish your poems. Remember for your comfort that it takes 50 years, or two generations, for the noblest poets to take their proper place. Greatness—true, stable, solid greatness, not the empty applause given to an ephemeral favorite—requires 50 years at least. Go, sir! Take the book I have given you, and in after years, when I am gone, tell the world that you knew—Paul the Wanderer!" I wrung his hand in silence and left him. More than 50 years have passed since he published that work. No one has yet spoken to me of Paul the Wanderer. But I now understood his dignity, his self respect and his content. He was anticipating and enjoying his future fame. He was living for posterity. Present poverty and neglect were nothing.—Walter Besant in London Queen.

Another Mammoth Statue.

The sculptor Nikolaus Geiger is putting the last touches to his statue of Barbarossa, which is to symbolize the ancient kingdom in the Kyffhauser monument, to be unveiled in 1896. The Barbarossa appears at the end of a vestibule in the style of an ancient castle, on the steps of the throne upon which he is sitting like the sleeping figures of the courtiers, with fabulous animals of the old mythic world. Barbarossa is represented at the moment of waking from his long sleep. In his right hand is his sword; his left hand strokes his long waving beard. Contrary to all other figures of the old hero, he is here represented as an actual emperor, with the features of a noble man. The whole monument, hewed from the rock, will be about 80 feet high. The figure of the seated monarch is about 30 feet high. —London Sun.

A few Pennies

on the one hand—ruined garments on the other. That will be the result of your trying to save money by using poor, cheap washing-powders, instead of Pearline. Just consider. How much could you save in a year if you bought the cheapest and most worthless? And how far would it go toward paying for the things ruined in a single month? You can't save anything by buying cheap washing-powders. The way to save money in washing is to use what has been proved to be absolutely safe. That is Pearline. Millions use it. 417

"America's Greatest Men and Women."

AMERICA'S GREATEST MEN AND WOMEN.

MR. WILSON TALKS.

MY Name is Wilson; I do an insurance business on LaSalle street, in Chicago Ill., and I live in Evanston, Ill. Evanston is what was originally a scattering population on a pretty point on Lake Michigan, esteemed years ago far from the city of Chicago, but now one of the varied towns which may go within it by vote of the population.

I am married and have a wife and one child. That child is a boy (I suppose I should feel the same solicitude if it was a girl), and I have a father's natural fancies as to what must be the best thing to give that child the right kind of intelligence, and so divert his course that he may succeed in life. I have studied a great deal upon the subject. My own experience would not be of great value, because I have succeeded only to the limit of the average man and am barely established; still, I succeeded only to the limit of the average man and am barely established; still, I own the house and lot upon which I live, and am feeling perfectly safe in meeting the exigencies of the year. I want the boy to take a broader view than I did, to be a bigger man in the world. I have studied how to teach him to do that, and he has done pretty well, as far as the preliminaries go. Now, I have thought over what I should say to him and have sometimes been puzzled. I could not very well tell him what to do. I wanted to tell him what I needed but what I did not learn myself when I was of his age, and what my father did not know how to tell me, or else was not thoughtful enough to do so. I wanted to tell him how to follow the example of those who have succeeded at the present time and under the circumstances which ordinarily affect a young man struggling in this Republic established on this comparatively new world to-day. I wanted to tell him just what he had better do to get along well, and to point out to him what had been done by the people who were successful at the present time.

Of course, the record of the people of any time past would not be of so much value, because circumstances must necessarily have been different when they were alive. I feel confident, though, that if I could learn, some way and somehow, what the people who are so successful to day have done and how they did it, I could give to my boy such advice as would make his own life at least as far removed from failure as justified by the natural ability he may possess.

I looked around for some authority which I might consult in order to give him the facts most essential with this idea of mine in mind, but I could find none until I discovered that a great publishing firm in Chicago had decided to bring out a book giving the photographs of all the people who are prominent in America to-day. Here was what I wanted. The book, as I have learned, is going to be published in 16 parts, 16 pages to each, with a recent photograph on each page of some active leading American man or woman of to-day, while underneath appears the story of that same person's life—the story telling what that person did, and how the ends attained were eventually accomplished. Here was what I wanted; here was what I needed in various ways; here was what I was certainly seeking in order to obtain the information with which to educate my boy and secure for him that knowledge which will give him a source of thought and make him prominent in the world.

I have the first sheets of this work. It is a graphic story of America's Greatest Men and Women, told in each instance on a single page underneath a photograph of recent date, which conveys to the eye an idea of what that person is. To me the photograph tells even more than the suggestive record beneath; and yet it is odd how in each instance the correct story corresponds with the expression upon the face which is reproduced in the portrait above. I do not know how the series will end. I know very little about this new feature of the newspaper people; I know nothing about the publishers and their expectations, but I do know this: that if the series so begun should be continued to its practical, ordinary good sense end—and I don't care whether that will include 200 or 700 of America's Greatest Men and Women, which is the title of the book—I do know this, that for the ordinary, active and alert business man—I will certainly say far more for the student or the literary man, or the politician or the statesman—for all these I will say it will be simply the most valuable and the most remarkable book produced in modern history. The wonder is that some one has not thought of it before. Yet no one seems to have done so since the days of Plutarch. Plutarch knew something. That shrewd old fellow knew that all who would get out of the drift, all who would accomplish great things, wanted to know every detail of the lives of those who had better luck or more courage or a broader brain than their fellows; but I am no authority on these points. I only know that there is produced a second Plutarch's Lives, that its biographies are shrewd, graphic and curt, and written without bias and without prejudice. I only know that there was a Plutarch—God bless the old fellow—and that there is this modern work.

This is the work I am going to give to my boy. I am going to make him read it thoroughly. The work is announced as consisting of 16 Parts, with 16 pages and 16 photographs in each part, and when bound, the whole series will make a great volume of 256 pages, the like of which has never been equaled. It is the story of the personal character of the men and women who are making the nation's history at this particular time. What a work this is! Do you imagine that I would miss it for my boy, or, incidentally, for myself?

MAGIC EXPLAINED.

THE STAR TRICKS OF HINDOO CONJURERS MADE EASY.

The Mango Trick Explained by Kellar, the Magician—It Is the Same Which Globe Trotter Stevens Claims Is Miraculously Performed by Yogi Men.

The sleight of hand performances of Mr. Maskelyne, a remarkably clever juggler, have excited a great deal of interest in London. Not only are his tricks skillfully done, but his explanations of other tricks have attracted much attention among a class of men who seldom visit the halls where feats of this sort are presented.

The Mail and Express recently published an article from the London Spectator in which the writer describes one or two tricks which he saw in India and which mystified him greatly. Here is one, which, by the way, is described by Thomas Stevens, the globe trotter, who says that the Yogi men, who perform it, are aided by an occult force that the world is as yet ignorant of.

A juggler placed a cloth over the pavement of the street, and presently he removed it, and there was a mango growing between the stones. "The juggler," adds the writer, "one of the hereditary caste, did undoubtedly make a leaf spring out of the ground; did make it grow into a dwarf mango, and did hand the mango from it to be eaten. It looked wonderful because of the apparent simplicity of the juggler, but he performed his feat in four processes, and between each he shook out his chudder, or muslin wrapper, so that it passed for an instant between the spectators and the plant. The writer had no doubt then and has no doubt now that this was done not to conceal anything, but to distract attention momentarily; that the first leaf, the upgrowth of leaves, the dwarf mango and the mango on it were all of wax or other carefully made imitation, and that the whole miracle was marvelously rapid sleight of hand."

To Americans who are interested in this sort of thing this mystery is almost amusing. It was exposed several years ago by Kellar, the prestidigitateur. Four or five years ago Kellar publicly offered $1,000 to any one who would perform a trick which he could not duplicate and which he could not prove to be done by wholly human aids. A number of persons who had recently visited India immediately deluged him with descriptions of this and other specimens of oriental jugglery. Of course as they could not perform the trick themselves they did not compete for his money offer, and therefore they were not publicly answered.

Kellar, however, gave me personally a full explanation not only of these tricks, but of several others which have long baffled the cleverest of the occidental investigators. The magician has spent more than 15 years of his professional life in India and the far east, and he has closely studied the tricks of the native jugglers with more or less profit to himself. This is how he explained the mango or pineapple trick as nearly as I can recall it:

"The first time I saw the mango trick," said he, "was in Bombay in 1879 or thereabouts, and the man who did it was the most skillful conjurer I ever saw in India. Even after I had learned the secret of his illusion I could not help admiring its ingenuity and the dexterity with which it was performed. The juggler and his two comrades chose a spot before the Prince of Wales' statue on the plaza. He first laid down a bag on the hard ground and then drew from it a large bandanna handkerchief. Digging a small hole in the ground with one finger, he buried a pineapple seed, and over this he placed his handkerchief. He carefully smoothed out the cloth, rubbing swiftly from left to right. After this maneuver was ended he made several passes with his arms over the handkerchief, while his comrades beat industriously upon their drums and blew upon their pipes.

"Suddenly, to my surprise, I saw the handkerchief begin to slowly rise in the center and gently sway from side to side as though a plant were really sprouting to life from the seed which he had planted beneath the cloth. When the handkerchief had risen like a tent to a height of about 12 inches, the conjurer stopped his incantations and cautiously lifted up the left hand corner of the cover and peered beneath it. Then, plunging both hands underneath to the accompaniment of loud and discordant music, he threw aside the cloth and showed a full grown pineapple plant.

"This is the way he did the trick, as he afterward admitted to me:

"In smoothing out the cloth he reached into the bag, the mouth of which was conveniently placed near the handkerchief, and whisked out a hooded cobra snake. The moment the reptile was laid down it began to coil. That made the handkerchief rise. When it had reached its full height, its angry hissing meanwhile being drowned by the music of the assistants, the performer looked under the cloth, taking care to draw the corner close to the mouth of the bag. Then he adroitly whisked out a hollow pineapple from the bag underneath the cloth. It was now the work of a minute only to force the snake into the apple, close the aperture, and the trick was done."—Benjamin Northrup in New York Mail and Express.

Lace and Brocade.

If you have any treasured short lengths of old brocade, you may produce them now and make the fronts of one of the long Louis Seize waistcoats of them. And if you are happy enough to possess old lace you can make them up on jabot to wear with the same. It is to mount the lace on bands of muslin, keeping the folds quite soft and using as few stitches as possible. In this way the tender susceptibilities of the fabric are spared, and when the jabot fashion is over and done with the lace remains to be used in some other way.—Fashion Journal.

"CHARLEY'S AUNT."

A Clean, Wholesome and Very Amusing Comedy.

Theatre-goers are preparing to extend a cordial welcome to Chas. Frohman's company, which will present "Charley's Aunt" for the first time in Middletown, on Monday night. "Charley's Aunt" is not like a great many of the comedies which have been imported from the other side, and it particularly differs in that it is not dependent on vulgarity for its humor or success. In tone, it is several keys above the average European comedy and it conjures its merriment by more legitimate methods. The company contains the names of well known players.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINATIONS.

For Governor,
DAVID BENNETT HILL.
For Lieutenant-Governor,
DANIEL N LOCKWOOD
For Judge of the Court of Appeals,
WILLIAM J. GAYNOR

BUZZARD'S BAY, Sept. 26th

No doubt the convention has done the best thing possible. I think those who were there ought to understand the situation and know what was suitable to do. I have confidence that their best judgment was exercised.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

The nomination of David B. Hill at Saratoga, yesterday, was a dramatic surprise. The situation was critical in the extreme. Judge Gaynor and Mr. Whitney, on whom Democratic sentiment had united as strong and available candidates, refused to allow the use of their names. When the convention met, the only candidate in the field was John Boyd Thacher, of Albany. His candidacy aroused no enthusiasm and the delegates felt that his nomination would give the State to the Republicans, would be an admission that victory was impossible. Then it was that the convention turned to the one man whom it felt could lead the party to triumphant victory. Past factional differences were forgotten; "anti-snappers" vied with "snappers" in their enthusiasm for the nomination of the man under whose leadership the Democracy of New York have never known defeat, and when the roll was called every vote was cast for David B. Hill.

Mr. Hill did not desire the nomination. To again be Governor of New York will confer on him no new honor or distinction and will compel him to give up the office which he now holds, the duties of which are congenial and in which he has won for himself new fame and reputation as an able, ready, well equipped man, and in which he has proved himself the intellectual equal of any of his fellow Senators. Mr. Hill is, however, too brave and loyal a Democrat to put self before duty to his party and he unhesitatingly accepted the call to again lead the Democratic hosts.

The nomination of Mr. Hill has changed the whole aspect of the political situation. The doubts and fears of Democrats have given place to confidence and hope; apathy and lukewarmness have been succeeded by zeal and enthusiasm and in every part of the State Democrats are preparing already for an active and aggressive campaign. Under Mr. Hill's leadership and direction there will be no lack of aggressiveness in the contest and victory will be won if earnest effort and thorough organization are of any avail.

We do not believe that past factional differences and personal enmities will cost Mr. Hill any Democratic votes. The Democratic party in this State never faced a crisis when more depended on the result of an election. The Republicans already control the Senate and if they elect the Governor, this fall, every branch, commission, and department of the State Government will pass into their control. There is nothing in the personality of the Republican candidate to attract Democratic votes and the Republican platform, bigoted, intolerant, pharisaical and canting, reckless and untruthful in its denunciation of Democracy, avowing a policy and purpose utterly abhorrent to every Democrat, ought to and will make every Democrat disposed to lukewarmness, earnest and active against the common enemy. If there were any signs of Democratic disaffection anywhere we know of no more effective campaign document than the Republican platform. Its mere perusal will make any Democrat "fighting mad," ready to forget all factional differences and support any candidate of his party, rather than give aid and comfort to the party of cant and hypocrisy, which hates Democrats with a hatred that passes words.

In 1855, when Levi P. Morton was a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, but was defeated in convention by Ira Davenport. Roscoe Conkling, discussing political conditions, said:

The morning I arrived from Europe I read a report of the Republican convention at Saratoga, and I was exceedingly surprised at what they had done. To begin with, I find upon referring to partisan papers that the principal and only qualification needed to secure the selection of a Governor of the State of New York,—the grand old Empire State of the Union,—was the fact that said candidate should be at least a seven millionaire. Behold the array of monumental wealth in the list of those who were considered possible candidates. There is our old friend, the Hon. Levi P. Morton—a very wealthy man, a very wealthy gentleman. Then there is the name of Mr. Drexel, a wealthy citizen. Then follows the younger William H. Seward, a wealthy banker; then Mr. Arkell, said to be ranked among the millionaires; then our friend Chauncey Depew, who has heavy wealth at his call; and lastly one Ira Davenport, who is a millionaire, and nothing else.

The most that Mr. Conkling could say of his old friend Morton as a gubernatorial candidate was that he was very wealthy,—not one word as to his ability or fitness. Mr. Morton has probably more wealth than he had in '85, and this it may be assumed is the sole reason why the Republican party accepted as a candidate the man whom it rejected nine years ago. Age has not brought him greater fitness for the place, but has, on the contrary, weakened and impaired his mental powers, but wealth not brains is the Republican test of fitness for high official place.

B. B. Odell, Jr., of Newburgh, was yesterday made chairman of the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee.

Mahlon Pitney, a lawyer of Morristown, has been nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the Fourth District of New Jersey, composed of the counties of Sussex, Warren, Hunterdon and Morris.

Hon. W. H. Clark, of Westtown, succeeds Charles Barnum, of Monticello, as member of the Democratic State Committee from this district. The selection is the very best that could have been made.

Daniel N. Lockwood, of Buffalo, who was nominated for Lieutenant Governor by acclamation, is a warm personal friend of President Cleveland and is known as Cleveland's mascot. In 1870 he made the speech nominating him for Sheriff of Erie county; in 1881 he named him as candidate for Mayor of Buffalo; in 1882 he presented his name in the State Convention, which nominated him for Governor, and in 1892, in the National Convention, nominated him for the Presidency. Mr. Lockwood represents one of the Erie districts in Congress, and has filled many other offices with marked ability. He is a strong man and his name adds strength to the ticket.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

From the Albany Argus.

The platform adopted at Saratoga is a sound expression of Democratic principles, an entire exposition of Democratic doctrine. It puts plainly before the people the issues of the campaign.

These issues are few in number. It is to be decided whether the people want to return to the high McKinley tariff and to the unsound financial legislation of the Republican party. As against this policy of exorbitant taxation and a depreciated currency the platform proposes free raw materials, lower taxes, and such a tariff as will increase the volume of business and bring back the prosperity which was driven away by Republican mistakes.

Attention is called to the fact that the Senators and Representatives to Congress from New York did their utmost to prevent the income tax, and this tax is properly deprecated.

President Cleveland and the Democratic Congress are commended, not only for their sound financial legislation, but for their fulfillment of the other pledges made to the people in the repeal of the federal election law, in adherence to the true principles of Civil Service reform and in the legislation for the suppression of trusts, promised in the Democratic platform.

The administration of Gov. Flower is heartily and unqualifiedly endorsed.

On the attempt to introduce religious beliefs as a qualification for public office the Democratic party takes a firm stand. Differing from the Republican convention, which, by smothering any reference to the subject in the committee on resolutions, virtually approved of a body organized on the principle of religious intolerance, the Democratic platform denounces the mixture of church and State as contrary to the spirit of American institutions. It condemns all such efforts. This is in line with the position taken by Senator Hill in his opening address to the convention that the Democratic party should stand for what it believes to be right, and that if the people are led away by follies of the hour to differ with sound principles, the Democratic party should refuse to be swayed by such considerations and strenuously adhere to the right.

The friendship of the Democratic party to the workingmen of the State and to the interest of labor is so well known that it was not necessary to view, however, of the attitude of the Republican party in refusing to appropriate the necessary moneys for the completion of public works, at a time when both the interests of the workingmen would be advanced as well as the great economy made to the State, it was well that the reference should be made to that hostility to workingmen which always accompanies a Republican legislature or a Republican convention.

The absurdity of the Republican management of the State finances is shown by the emptiness of the State Treasury and the insufficiency of the appropriations for the government of the State.

The denunciation of the Republican Constitutional Convention is thoroughly deserved.

THE BEST FRUIT OF FOUR CENTURIES OF STRUGGLE.

President Charles W. Eliot, in October Forum

The first moral cause of permanence of which the American Republic has the advantage is the principal of toleration in religion—a principal which has been very recently put in practice, not by any means in all parts of of the civilized world, but in a few favored regions, and notably in the United States. On one of the tablets of the Water gate at Chicago was written this sentence: "Toleration in religion, this is the best fruit of the last four centuries." This statement is no exaggeration, but the literal truth. Toleration in religion is absolutely the best fruit of all the public struggles, labors, and sorrows the nations have borne during the last four centuries.

The Largest Stock of Clothing Ever in Middletown!

We confidently make the above assertion and with it, this; that nowhere in Orange county can a purchaser secure equal value for the money expended. There is not a department of the business that is not stocked to supply any want of any person. This same completeness prevails in all grades and all prices. There are just as many varieties and styles, all correct, for the man who buys a five dollar suit as the man who buys a twenty-five dollar suit, but because we sell twenty-five dollar suits, let not the man that can't afford to pay more than five, stay away. His wants shall be met as carefully as the others. Let us show you the stock.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. A. Heath, pastor of the First Baptist Church, of this city.

The bridal couple left this morning for a short wedding trip to Newburgh. They will make their residence at Goshen, where the groom is employed in J. Seeley's bakery.

Avery—Jordan.

A very pretty home wedding took place, yesterday, at the residence of Mr. Moses W. Jordan, near Winterton, when his daughter, Anna M., was married to Calvin I. Avery, a popular young blacksmith of Winterton. The ceremony was performed by Elder Benton Jenkins.

Twelve o'clock, noon, was the hour appointed for the ceremony, and the bridal party entered the parlors a few minutes afterwards. The bride was attended by her sister, M. Estelle Jordan and Mr. William O. Wollenhauph, of Middletown, was best man.

About fifty guests were present and the bride was the recipient of many handsome gifts.

WARWICK'S FIRE PARADE.

Four Visiting Companies in Town—Streets Alive With Visitors—Six Companies and Seven Bands in Line.

Delaware Hose Company, No. 2, of Port Jervis, passed through this city, this morning, on the Mountain Express, enroute to Warwick, where the company participated in the firemen's parade in that village, as the guests of Excelsior Hose Company. The Erie Band, of Port Jervis, accompanied the firemen, who had as guests, the President and Board of Trustees of the village, the Chief of the Department and a number of Warwick.

At Goshen, the members of Elliott Hook and Ladder Company, who are the guests of Goodwill H. and L. Company, boarded the train, and at Greycourt the special cars were switched to the Lehigh and Hudson and the firemen were soon landed in Warwick.

A telephone message to the ARGUS from Warwick, this afternoon, announces that a large crowd of visitors is present from the neighboring villages, and that the Firemen's celebration will be a grand success.

The first company to arrive was the Kittatinny Hose, of Newton, N. J., who accompanied by the Newton Cornet Band, pulled into the Lehigh & Hudson depot at 8:45. At 9:30, Delaware Hose Co., No. 2, of Port Jervis, with the Erie Band, and Elliott Hook and Ladder Co., of Goshen, with the Goshen Band, arrived and were escorted to their several headquarters.

The Alert Hook and Ladder Co., of Passaic, N. J., headed by Robinson's Band, of Paterson, were the last of the visitors to arrive at 10:45 o'clock.

At 11 o'clock the visitors and the home companies assembled on the grounds of the Chief of the Warwick Fire Department, Mr. S. S. Van Saun, where they were given a cordial welcome by the president of the village, Mr. Clinton W. Wisner.

At the conclusion of his remarks the firemen were escorted to Demerest's Hall, where an informal lunch was served. The visiting officials were entertained by President Wisner on the lawn in front of his handsome residence, "The Anchorage."

The decorations surpass anything that has ever before been attempted by the residents of this village.

The parade was a very imposing one and besides the visiting companies above mentioned, the two home organizations, Excelsior Hose Company No. 1, with the Franklin, N. J., Band, and Goodwill Hook and Ladder Co., No. 1, with the Amity Band, were in the procession, which was headed by the Chester Band and visiting officials.

THE BENSON FISH SPEARING CASE.

Mr. H. C. Benson, After a Two Days' Trial, Acquitted of the Charge.

Mr. H. C. Benson is, to-day, receiving the congratulations of his friends upon his acquittal of the charge of spearing trout at Rockland in July last.

The trial, which was held before Justice Darbee, occupied the attention of the Justice and a jury for two days. A number of witnesses were sworn and an astonishingly strong case was apparently presented against Mr. Benson. The cross-examination by Recorder Bradner, counsel for Mr. Benson, was of a gilt edged quality and as he insisted upon excluding all witnesses except the one who was being examined, he soon had the witnesses for the prosecution contradicting each other and telling stories that were absolutely irreconcilable.

The evidence produced by the prosecution was that three men saw Mr. Benson spear a trout and hold it up to the lighted torch for inspection. They then jumped into the stream and arrested him, when he threw the fish away. The torch went out and the trio went to a house a quarter of mile away, and returned with a lantern, when they claimed they found three trout with the marks of the spear upon them.

One man testified that he knew it was a trout which Mr. Benson had in his hand, as he "recognized the spots." The witness, however, was unable to distinguish a ten cent piece from a penny held in the hands of the Recorder, in plain sight, at a distance of ten feet, in the bright light of the court room.

Mr. Benson admitted having been in the stream with a spear for the purpose of spearing eels and suckers, but denied having speared the trout.

The case was given to the jury shortly before 4 o'clock and a verdict was not reached until 10 o'clock, one juror having held out for conviction for five and one-half hours.

MONHAGENS' HOME COMING.

Warmly Welcomed as They Returned Laden With Trophies—A Most Enjoyable Trip.

Monhagen Hose Company returned from its trip to Scranton via O. and W. train 2, at 4:39 o'clock, yesterday afternoon. They formed in line on Low avenue, and headed by Lincoln Post Drum Corps, marched through Wickham avenue, to North street, to Franklin Square and through East Main street to the truck house, where the company was dismissed.

Each set of fours carried a banner captured from among the decorations which adorned the buildings and streets of Scranton, and as the firemen marched through the streets they were warmly greeted by their friends upon the sidewalks.

Monhagens and their guests are agreed that they had the finest time they ever experienced on a like trip. They report that the citizens of the "Electric City" left nothing undone to make their visit an enjoyable one and one long to be remembered.

The company visited Scranton as the guests of Crystal Hose Company, but upon their arrival found that the entire population had joined with the Crystals in their efforts to make the visit a pleasant one.

Gentlemen:—Your Book and sample bottle came duly at hand. We have used the Food almost exclusively since the birth of our son, who will be three months old on the 29th inst. It has proved its merits, he is growing finely, and in good health. We pronounce it excellent, and will recommend it to all mothers, and especially to those who have a scarcity of the breast. The healthy condition of our little one surprises us all; we cannot do without it. With us it is a household word—"Mellin's Food." Gentlemen:—Mellin's Food gives the best satisfaction. I would not be without it.
Yours respectfully, Mrs. J. GATES.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Gentlemen:—Just one year ago I received a notice from you inviting me to try a sample bottle of your famous food. We were blessed with a new arrival, a girl, we tried the Food, and have continued to use it right along. If the baby did not need it, the mother took it, and so the child received it all the same, indirectly. The baby is first-class, good health, of mouth and temper and in fact carries out her name, viz.: an angel. No bother at night at all as to her teething, we have only discovered them by feeling them, because she has not shown any outward sign, in the customary manner, by crying.
Yours respectfully, B. E. ANGEL.

Dear Sirs.—I have tried other kinds of Food, but none seemed so agreeable as Mellin's Food. The baby has thrived wonderfully since using it, as it agrees well with the breast milk. Mrs. C. W. JAMES.

THE BIRD.

A-floating, a-floating,
Across the sleeping sea,
All night I hear a singing bird
Upon the topmost tree.

"Oh, came you from the isles of Greece,
Or from the banks of Seine,
Or off some tree in forests free
That fringe the western main?"

"I came not off the old world,
Nor yet from off the new.
But I am one of the birds of God
Which sing the whole night through."
—Charles Kingsley.

REPENTANCE.

"You have my decision, sir."

Miriam Gray spoke in a sharp, quick tone, her dark eyes flashing, her queenly head set to one side, her gestures nervous, yet graceful.

A pallor swept across Bruce Ventnor's face, and he lifted his hand to his mouth to hide the twitching of the muscles. There was nothing ambiguous about her reply. It was an unmistakable rejection. It was useless either to plead or argue. He was at a loss to account for her repressed agitation. He watched her through the mellow twilight and became more conscious than ever of her exceeding loveliness and the hard blow which she had dealt him.

He had been paying her attention for some time and was sure that she loved him. That was why his bewilderment was so great and his disappointment so keen. Knowing that his character was beyond reproach, and that he had in nowise offended her, he felt justified in demanding the reason for her strange conduct. He knew her too well to fancy for a moment that she was trifling with him. She was neither variable in her moods nor fickle in her friendships.

"Miriam," Bruce Ventnor said, his voice husky, his manner agitated, "I have the right to ask your reason for this rejection."

"No, you have not," she replied, the color coming and going in her face. "Still I'll tell you. I am prompted by revenge."

"By revenge?" repeated he in a dazed tone.

"Yes," was her measured reply. "I want you to suffer."

"And you enjoy it?" he said bitterly. "Then you know how much I love you it seems. I always knew you did not question that."

They had been seated upon a bench outside a small pavilion, but were now standing. She was suffering more than she would have cared to let him know and was impatient to get away.

"Pray, in what way have I wronged you?" he asked. "Not in thought, word nor act. I consider myself the soul of honor."

"Oh, you do?" and she laughed mockingly. "Instead, you are a man without principle."

He groaned aloud in his powerful effort to repress his angry indignation.

"I am not avenging myself, but another," she said, speaking with rapidity. "Did you ever know Blanche Carrol? Oh, it is not necessary for me to remind you of your baseness!"

She turned abruptly from him and walked rapidly toward the hotel. He watched her until she had disappeared in the gloom of the gathering twilight, one hand pressed against his forehead, a hurt, baffled, mystified expression in his face. He strode up the beach, then along a wild ledge of rocks, as if to find solace in the loneliness of the hour.

When Miriam Gray reached her room at the hotel, reaction set in, and her great grief showed how devotedly she loved the man whom she had insulted. She flung herself upon the bed and cried as if her heart were broken.

"Oh, Blanche," she exclaimed aloud between her hysterical sobs, "you are avenged, but you will never know what it has cost me! Oh, why was I to love him so precipitately before I heard about his perfidy?"

Early though it was she retired to bed, but it was almost dawn before she fell asleep, so intense was her suffering.

Three years later again found Miriam Gray at the seashore. She had not met Bruce Ventnor during that interval, nor had she heard from him.

She was as handsome as ever and more royal in her manners, but her face and conversation lacked brilliancy. She was more quiet and reserved, more chary in her friendships, ready to suspect and heartily tired of the hollowness of fashionable life.

Her love affair with Bruce Ventnor had caused the change. In punishing him for his perfidy to her Cousin Blanche she had sacrificed herself. She could never love another man as she had loved him.

As she was one day walking on the promenade with her cousin Blanche they suddenly came upon Bruce Ventnor. He was alone and stood still for a minute, the meeting was so unexpected to him.

He lifted his hat, looked mournfully and reproachfully at Miriam, as if half inclined to speak, and then strode toward the nearest pavilion.

Miriam recognized him and was touched at the look he had bestowed upon her.

"Who was that gentleman?" asked her Cousin Blanche. "Did he bow to you or to me?"

Receiving no reply, she looked up into her companion's face.

"Why, Miriam, how pale you are," she exclaimed, "and how agitated!"

"Blanche, do you mean to say that you do not know that man?" Miriam asked, her voice a mere whisper.

"I never saw him until today," was her cousin's reply.

"Oh!" cried Miriam, catching her breath, one hand unconsciously clinched, "is he not the man who trifled with you?"

"Bruce Ventnor?" replied Blanche. "Why, no, child!"

The blood ebbed from Miriam's lips, and a low moan escaped from them. She grew so weak for a little while that she was forced to lean heavily upon Blanche, who conducted her to one of the rustic benches. She fanned her, rubbed her hands and spoke to her in soothing tones. When her cousin had sufficiently recovered, she asked:

"Miriam, what is this mystery?"

"Oh, I am so afraid that I have wronged that—man and—myself. I was so cruel to him, for I supposed that I was avenging you. His name is Bruce Ventnor."

"Eh?" exclaimed Blanche, who was beginning to comprehend. "He is not the Bruce Ventnor that I knew." And her voice shook with emotion. "Can it be that there are two gentlemen of the same name? I remember hearing him say he had some cousins. Oh, I am so sorry and so—so—glad!"

Miriam Gray looked at her friend in a sort of stupor.

"Sorry, dear, because of what you have suffered and glad because everything will yet come out all right."

Miriam mournfully shook her head.

"He will never forgive me," she said. "He is proud and sensitive. My words cut deep—all the more so because so undeserved. I gave him no explanation, no chance to defend himself."

"You can explain now," suggested Blanche.

"No!" replied Miriam in a strained tone, a proud look coming to her face.

She wrung her hands and moaned, and nothing that Blanche could say carried consolation with it. Her love had been but dormant. It reasserted itself. Bruce Ventnor had been blameless. She had deeply wronged him. She was paying the penalty for her haste.

"I would tell him all," advised Blanche.

"He may spurn me," cried Miriam through her sobs. "He may be as cruel and unreasonable as I was and with more of an excuse. It happened three years ago. He may love some one else now—nay, he may be married to another. There is nothing for me to do but to remain silent and—endure."

Her grief was so great that Blanche ceased her efforts to pacify her.

* * * * * *

The orchestra was playing a quadrille. Miriam Gray sat on the veranda by an open window, looking in at the dancers, her face and form plainly visible. A gentleman stepped from among the shadows on the porch. He stopped beside Miriam.

"Miriam!" he simply said, though his voice trembled.

Ah, she knew who had spoken! No one else could have pronounced her name with such sweet tenderness. The blood filled her face, then left it deathly pale.

She lifted her eyes swiftly to his, a fond, glad, appealing look in them.

"Your cousin has told me all," he said, his handsome eyes aglow. "She felt it to be her duty. You did it for her sake. Your pride stood in your way. The mistake arose from a confusion in names. A cousin of mine was the perfidious fellow, while I am the honest, true hearted man I claimed to be."

Oh, it was so precious to her to know that he had forgiven her and was willing to receive her in favor again! She grew so excited that her fan shook in her hands.

"The moon is rising," he said as he offered her his arm.

She did not want to attract attention to herself. She appreciated his purpose. She gave him a grateful glance. She arose, took his arm, and they strolled down the beach.

"Miriam," he said, looking down upon her, his eyes shining into hers, "three years ago you rejected me. What would you answer now?"

He felt that she was trembling.

"Oh, how I wronged you!" she cried. "Have you forgiven me?"

"Yes, darling."

"Oh, Mr. Ventnor!" she exclaimed, "I do not deserve it. I loved you very much then—I love you more now. I cannot make a wreck of my happiness. You dear, kind, forgiving, great hearted man, I accept you gladly, proudly, just as"——

"Emphatically as you rejected me," completed he, his face shining. "I am thoroughly satisfied."

He stooped and kissed her, and no reconciliation could have been more complete.—London Million.

Muscle Development.

Some recent scientific researches, which can doubtless be trusted, show that the weight of muscles of animals was increased 40 per cent by a proper periodic application of an electric current, the growth being a true development of the muscle. According to this, it will now be possible to increase to order size of any desired muscle without tiresome gymnastic exercises by lying in a soft chair and having the current applied. This, we suggest, might be done at night by an automatic apparatus, thus saving time. Persons who are improperly developed may now be balanced or trued up. Muscles shrunken by age may now be made plump again. Calves which nature or exercise have failed to develop sufficiently will now no longer be a drawback to wearing knee breeches or the short bloomers of the female bicyclist. The question naturally suggests itself, What will happen if this process of developing muscles electrically is continued still longer? If some way is then found to develop the bones, the manufacture of giants by electrical means will be an easy matter.—Electrical World.

Lord Denman and His Hatter.

This odd story is told of the late Lord Denman, who, on being reminded by a west end hatter that a small account was "overdue," visited the shop and gave the manager a legal reply to the request for payment. "You state," he said solemnly as he stood over him, shaking his finger at him as though warning him to be careful, "that this account is overdue. Remember that a bill of exchange or bill of acceptance may become overdue, but a tradesman's account never. A gentleman pays when he thinks he will or when he has the money; but, to show that no ill feeling exists, I will pay the account and take another hat."—London Star.

THE SUMMER GIRL'S RETURN.

The summer girl is home again,
Her cheeks tanned to the brown,
Clear hue of health so seldom seen
Within the crowded town.
Fresh air and exercise have done
For her their level best.
Her eyes are joyous, and life has now
For her no zest.

What matters it how many hearts
Are suffering cruel wounds?
The summer girl has had her fun
And gained just eighteen pounds.
To her flirtation is but sport,
And when she's tired of love
She flings it from her, as she might
A faded, wornout glove.

She's had fun at the mountains,
And she's had fun at the beach,
While tantalized young men have found
Her just beyond their reach.
She's flirted, waltzed and walked with all,
With preference for none,
And many a youth has grieved to find
That he was not the one.

And now she's home again at last,
Her love-lorn ones chanced
By all the leagues she's rowed and sailed
And all the miles she's danced.
She's home again, far sweeter than
She was before she went,
And if the world could see her heart
It couldn't find a dent.

Everything Was Tied Up.

He wasn't very prosperous looking, and national finance was hardly a subject one would expect such an out at knees and elbow individual to be interested in, yet he stood before the bulletin board in front of a Broadway hatter and studied the figures which are put out from time to time upon it, setting forth the amount of free gold in the treasury. He read them time and again, turned away and then went back to look them over once more, observing to a bystander in a tone of wonder:

"Fifty-five millions of free gold and over in the treasury! Don't seem possible I do it?"

"Well, there it is," answered the bystander shortly. He was waiting with as much patience as he could well command for the score of the New Yorks in the third inning of the Boston game and was not worrying over such minor matters as national solidity.

"Yes, I know it's there," continued the first speaker. "'cause the figgers says so, but it ain't natural just the same."

"What's the matter with it?" impatiently asked the ball fiend.

"Well, with all the poverty goin around, it should be in our hands. It belongs to us, don't it?"

"I suppose so," absentmindedly replied the other, thinking of the game. "We're one ahead."

"No we ain't, either. We're nothin ahead as long as it's tied up there."

"Tie nothin. We've got a lead," indignantly retorted the crank, rooting very hard as he saw the boy coming to mark up the inning on the board.

"We've got no lead on them millions, if I know anythin about it. Why, it was only this mornin that I went out to borry a quarter, and there wasn't that amount of money among all my friends. Think of it! Not 25 cents in the crowd, an all them millions of ourn tied up there. You ain't got a five, have you?"

"Five! No, but there's two," cried the rooter, as the boy put up another tally for the New Yorks.

"Where?" asked the man eagerly.

"On the board. Can't you see 'em?"

"Just like the millions," said the ragged citizen, turning mournfully away, "tied up."—New York Herald.

A Question of Forehead.

The member of parliament for one of the most important southern divisions is possessed of a magnificent bald head. He was in a shaving saloon the other day getting shaved. When he had finished, the barber remarked:

"I've got a splendid new hair restorer here. Will you let me try it on your head?"

The M. P. assented, with an observation which showed that he had had previous experience in the matter: "All right, I don't think you can do me any harm."

Thereupon the barber, with great flourish, took a bottle from the stand, and with much ceremony began to rub his customer's head. After he had been rubbing some time he stopped suddenly and seemed greatly surprised. Turning to his customer, he said in a most flustered manner:

"You must excuse me, sir, but I really forgot to ask you how high you wanted your forehead."—Modern Society.

Resources of Genius.

The plantation melodist of the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" combination rushed into the little room where the manager was acting in the double character of property man and sheet iron thunder purveyor. His voice trembled, and his face looked almost pale through its burned cork.

"Mr. Oleman," he said, "one of the Topsys is sick and can't go on."

"Tell Miss Pingle," exclaimed the manager in a ringing voice and without a moment's hesitation, "to black up and take the part. We'll get along with one Eva in the death scene tonight'"—Chicago Tribune.

The Kind He Needed.

"You change your hats frequently," said Miss Sharpe to Cholly.

"Ya-as," was the reply, "it is hard for me to get a hat to suit my head, doncherknow."

"Is that so? Well, the hat you need to suit your head is a soft hat."—New York Press.

AN "ARGUS" MAN OFF DUTY AIMS AT SEVERAL SUBJECTS.

A Man With a Long Memory Fulfills a Vow of His School Days—The Growth of a Story — Another Public School Humbug.

"All things come to him who waits." A few days ago, a muscular young man entered a school house in Nebraska, and going up to the teacher greatly surprised that individual by giving his ears a vigorous pulling. The teacher did not recognize his assailant, who, after the ear-pulling, introduced himself as a former pupil of the pedagogue who had pulled his ears fifteen years before. The youngster had vowed then and there that when he was big enough to do it with safety he would get even by pulling the teacher's ears, and finding himself within a few miles of his old teacher's school, he had remembered his boyish vow and felt it a duty and a privilege to settle the long standing obligation. It's a lucky thing for school teachers that all pupils have not as long memories as this Nebraska ear-puller. If they had, and like him squared accounts, school teaching would be classed as an extra-hazardous occupation.

An interesting illustration of the way a story grows as it travels is furnished by a paragraph now going the rounds of the papers concerning the case of the Livingston Manor man, who is said to have broken his back by falling from a building, and to have had the dislocated vertebræ restored to their proper place by the jolting of a wagon, in which he was being conveyed from the scene of the accident to his home. This story was big enough to give its author a strong presumptive qualification for membership in any liars' club that ever was formed, but as the story traveled it was modified and amplified, and as I saw it, to-day, in a Western New York paper, it was the man's neck that was broken, and the jolt that straightened out the kinks in the cervical vertebræ came just in time, for the death damps were already gathering on the poor fellow's brow and the death rattle was sounding in his throat.

"Bird Day" is the latest educational fad and it is proposed to set apart a day in the schools of the country to be devoted to teaching the pupils what useful, beautiful and charming creatures birds are, and to developing a sentiment that will preserve birds from women who wear them and small boys who kill them. The theory of "Bird Day" is all right, but if its practical value is no greater than that of Arbor Day has been, it's not worth while to divert the minds of children from readin', 'ritin' and 'rithmatick Arbor Day, as it is observed is a ridiculous humbug for, missing entirely the main point that was intended to be accomplished by the institution of the day,—the giving of practical instruc ion in the planting, transplanting and culture of trees, and anxious to go through the outward form of observance by planting trees and shrubs, the work is so carelessly and improperly done at three-quarters of the schools of the State, that Arbor Day annually results in the destruction of thousands of trees. A case in point may be seen at a school house not far from this city, where over a dozen trees and at least half a dozen shrubs were set out on last Arbor Day, every one of which has died because teacher and pupils were ignorant of the proper methods of transplanting and supposed that if the roots of tree and shrub were stuck into a hole in the ground and covered up, nature would do the rest.

More Comstock Arrests Expected in Sullivan County.

Although Anthony Comstock has left Monticello, the detective work he did while there and which has resulted in the arrest of Frank Teel and four others for dealing in obscene books and pictures, is likely to bear further fruit. The Monticello correspondent of the Gazette notes a rumor that two Thompsonville women and some of the youths of Monticello are to be arrested.

Accident Insurance Paid.

First Assistant Chief Chas. Higham of the fire department, this morning, was handed a check for $75, being the amount due him from the Fidelity and Casualty Insurance Company, for three weeks' disability arising from an accident received while going to a fire recently. The policy was issued through the agency of Combs & Lutes.

It is the duty of everyone, whether at home or traveling for pleasure or business, to equip himself with the remedy which will keep up strength and prevent illness, and cure such ills as are liable to come upon all in every day life. Hood's Sarsaparilla keeps the blood pure and less liable to absorb the germs of disease.

BEFORE THE RECORDER.

A Plain Drunk, a Drunk and Disorderly and the Notorious Kate Kelly Face His Honor.

—Robert Monroe, an itinerant tattoo artist, was found lying across the sidewalk on Franklin street, last night, in an advanced state of inebriation. He spent the night in the lock-up, and was run out of town.

—William H. Carlyle, a veteran of the late war, was intoxicated on North street, last night, and insulted several ladies, who crossed his path. A citizen nabbed him and sent for an officer. He was fined three dollars or ten days, and not having the necessary funds went to Goshen.

—The notorious Katie Kelly was gathered in by Officer Durham on Cottage street. She was very drunk and a gang of hoodlums was following her. Katie was arrested for a similar offense in this city last spring. She told a pitiful tale of her downfall and the Recorder allowed her to return to her home and children in Port Jervis. Katie was arrested there and later turned up in Newburgh, where she alarmed the officials of the jail by an attempht at suicide by hanging in her cell. She was next heard of in Goshen on her release from jail, and went right back for ten days for intoxication. The Recorder, who was in an unusually happy frame of mind, this morning, on account of his success at Rockland in the Benson case, did not remember Katie and after a severe reprimand discharged her on her promise to go to her home at Port Jervis.

THE HOMEOPATHIC DOCTORS.

Meeting of the State Medical Society—Ended—The Papers Read of Unusual Interest and Value—Thanks to Hospital Trustees and Doctors.

The two days' meeting of the New York State Homeopathic Medical Society was brought to a close at a late hour, yesterday afternoon, and is considered to have been one of the most successful meetings in the history of the society.

While the attendance was not as large as was anticipated, nor as great as that at some previous meetings, it is generally conceded that the character of the papers which were presented by the members was equal to, if not superior to any that have been presented in recent years.

Before adjournment the following resolution, which was presented by Dr. A. R. Wright, of Buffalo, was adopted:

Resolved, That we, the members of the New York State Homeopathic Medical Society, hereby tender to the trustees and to Dr. S. H. Talcott and his associates our thanks for their hospitalities and courtesies at the meeting September 25th and 26th, 1894. We wish to express our gratification at the great progress that has been made since the opening of the hospital twenty years ago and our appreciation of the great work done for the cure and relief of disordered minds.

We also hope that the wish of the homeopathic physicians and their clientele throughout the State may be respected, and the hospital be permitted to develope still further in the lines already laid down by the management of the hospital.
